Introduction - "Don Juan de Onate, colonizer of New Mexico, its first governor and only adelantado, merits a high place among the first pioneers of the United States. It was Onate, who after finally received the coveted privilege of conquering and pacifying the province of New Mexico in 1595, established the first European settlements--San Juan de Los Caballeros and San Gabriel--in northern New Mexico, more than a thousand miles from New Mexico City.... Throughout the next three centuries, New Mexico remained a Spanish province, completely isolated by distance from other parts of the empire, but the Spanish language was her mother tongue, and Spanish forms of government, law, and religion were the basis of her institutions.
