Rodney Owen, a lad of fifteen, born of Yankee ancestors who followed the sea, decides to try to enter Annapolis. His widowed mother spurs him on to this determination, hoping that thus he may be true to "the sea in his blood" and "be somebody". Suddenly, Mrs. Owen dies, leaving Rodney without family or means for completing his education. Then it is that he reads a farewell letter from his mother urging him to continue his schooling and achieve his dream of Annapolis, and to never forget the Scout Oath and its Three Points of Honor.
