Grant is damaged, selfish, and undeserving of love...or so he thinks.

Jessa is happy, in love, and has overcome her past...or so she thinks.

Grant and Jessa can't stop thinking about one another since being introduced at a party a month ago. And despite their differences, they can't seem to stay away from each other either. However, both are hiding secrets of less-than-perfect pasts, fearing what will happen when those mistakes come to light. As they grow closer, they each battle their own insecurities, and neither believes that they are worthy of the kind of love that they both still want. So if it's true that opposites attract, what happens when the similarities begin to surface?
