Serial killers, private eyes, cops, and bodies inhabit this guide to crime fiction in the electronic age, where reading habits are undergoing change with the growing use of e-books and e-readers. The focus is on e-books and the independent authors, known as indies, who write them, and the aim is to introduce indie crime fiction to discerning e-book readers. This guide considers murder and mystery, from the cosy to the noir, and how it has developed over the years, stretching from The Newgate Calendars, through the dime novels and penny dreadfuls, covering the golden age authors typified by Agatha Christie, the hard-boiled era of Hammett and Chandler, and on to the modern crime and thriller novels. As well as sections on e-books and e-readers, the indie author and publisher, and publishing options, there are sections on many subgenres of crime fiction including mystery, cosy, romantic suspense, historical, paranormal/supernatural, psychological, humour, medical, legal, political, hard-boiled, female sleuths, police procedural, noir/dark, tartan noir, and serial killers. Chris Longmuir is an award winning novelist. Her crime novels have won the Pitlochry Award, and the Dundee International Book Prize.

Terrance Pitt:

As a college student exactly feel bored in order to reading. If their teacher questioned them to go to the library or to make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just little students that has reading's spirit or real their interest. They just do what the instructor want, like asked to the library. They go to at this time there but nothing reading seriously. Any students feel that reading is not important, boring as well as can't see colorful images on there. Yeah, it is to be complicated. Book is very important for you personally. As we know that on this time, many ways to get whatever we want. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. Therefore this Crime Fiction and the Indie Contribution can make you experience more interested to read.
