The language of poetry is particularly well-suited to capture the beauty of nature. Now, journey into the writings of poets through the ages, as they examine, respond to, and celebrate the wonders of the natural environment. Divided into four sections to reflect the four seasons, this collection includes such luminaries as William Shakespeare, Walt Whitman, Emily Dickinson, Robert Frost, and many more, in a time span covering the 16th through the early 20th century. With an introduction and nature photographs by Greg Fox.
