Most students in middle schools and high schools will have to answer document-based questions (DBQ's) in their many challenging tests including SATs, ACTs, and state assessment exams. Even teachers of high school advanced placement classes expect their students to write effective document-based essays. Reading Between the Lines is designed to help students of any age understand, practice, and write effective DBQs so that they can improve their scores on standardized tests and become a more successful student. This workbook helps students practice brainstorming, drafting, revising, and editing with proven methods. It also includes a glossary of essay terms and sample essays.
